FROM THE RABBI'S STUDY

Standing on the parted shores of history, we still believe what we were taught before we ever stood at Sinai's foot; that wherever we go, it is eternally Egypt; that there is a better place, a promised land; that the way to that promise passes through the wilderness; that there is no way to get from here to there except by joining hands together.

---- From our prayerbook
 Crossing the sea into freedom was only a moment long -- but it influences every day of these past 3,000 years.
 The Exodus is such a metaphor for life. All challenges are a form of leaving Egypt.

We need each other -- holding hands. That is why Temple Beth Hillel is here.

B'shalom,
 Rabbi G.

TORAH PORTIONS

Yitro—Exodus 18:1-20:23— The portion tells the story of Jethro's visit to the camp of Israel, then relates the great theophany at Mount Sinai, where God gives Israel the Ten Commandments and invites the people to enter a special covenant relationship with Him.

Mishpatim— Exodus 21:0-24:18— The first three chapters of this Torah portion deliver a legal code of laws and commandments that form a nucleus for the Torah's laws. The last chapter tells the story of how the people of Israel consented to keep these laws and entered into a covenant relationship with God through a series of rituals conducted by Moses.

T'rumah— Exodus—25:1-27:19 — In the Torah, terumah refers to a certain type of offering dedicated to the Temple, like a tithe or firstfruits offering. In Exodus 25, the contribution is for the building of a holy place. This Torah reading is occupied with the instructions for the building of the Tabernacle and its furnishings. .

T'tzaveh— Exodus 27:20-30:10 — This Torah portion continues to narrate the instructions for the construction of the Tabernacle, focusing particularly on the priesthood that was to serve in that sanctuary. The Israelites are commanded to make special garments for Aaron and his sons to wear while ministering as priests. After describing the priestly garments, the portion concludes with instructions for the ritual inauguration of Aaron and his sons into the priesthood.

URJ has much more information about each week's Torah portion at <http://www.reformjudaism.org/learning>.

A new group has been formed to help the many families who fled Puerto Rico following Hurricane Maria. Temple Beth Hillel is proud to be included in the Hartford Jewish Alliance for Caribbean Relief.

Many families have already arrived, most with just the clothes on their backs. In addition to support for housing, employment, clothing and language supports, these citizens need food. The most basic necessity. We will be hosting a food drive through February 9th. As we extend our hands in friendship we hope we can offer our new neighbors foods they find comforting and familiar. Brands such as Goya and Grace, found in the international aisle of the supermarket, are preferred. Click here for a more complete list

Currently housed at 15 Van Dyke Avenue in Hartford, the Center provides non-perishable foods, clothing and toiletries. The Center has also created space for employment assistance, housing, legal aid, and public services such as public library cards and ID's. From The President

January was a busy month at Temple Beth Hillel with so many opportunities for listening and learning, coming together as a community, gaining additional perspective on Israel and deepening our ties to our Jewish values. In this Newsletter, you'll hear about our annual Shema Tour through the eyes of Leland Bradbard and read a reflection on the topic of "Am I Jewish Enough?" from Sue Simons who was moved by one of the teen speakers at the 2017 URJ Biennial. As we continue on with this winter, we have many ways for people to get involved. For teens, we'll be hosting our first joint project with JT Connect and NFTY. (If anyone has any ideas for funds to support a Youth Advisor, please let me know!) If you're interested in tikkun olam, we'll be carpooling on February 4th to Hartford to support Hurricane Maria Relief, we'll have more information about our Shema Tour Project: Hands On Hartford Kitchen to Pantry Produce Initiative, and we'll continue to have food drives. For holidays, we have Shabbat, Tu B'Shvat (with seders), Purim (including Shpiel, Carnival and Masquerade), Passover (including a Friday night community seder) and Yom HaShoah (with an innovative way to honor and remember)— which we'll mark as a community with meaningful services, tzedakah opportunities and events. I encourage everyone to take pictures (when appropriate) and capture your thoughts to share about our events. We'll seek new partnerships outside of our Temple walls. Lastly, we'll continue to look for ways to help our members live lives of wholeness, justice and compassion. B'Shalom

Jason Wasserman

Reflections from URJ Biennial

At one of the plenary sessions at the 2017 URJ Biennial this past December in Boston, there was a very well-spoken young woman representing NFTY. I was instantly captivated by her first words: "Am I Jewish enough?" She was the child of an interfaith family who had embraced her Judaism full heartedly and still questioned her "Jewishness." I could not but take this to heart, for this is a question I have asked myself over the years. Then, I began to question the reasoning behind this insecurity.

By whose standards are we judging ourselves? The criteria are as varied and numerous as the number of members of your congregation, the Jews in your neighborhood, the authors of the books we read, the articles in our magazines, and on to an endless number of references and people.

What makes one Jewish? Is being born to a Jewish mother enough? Must you keep Kosher? Does it matter how often you attend services? Do you have to have a religious education and be able to read Hebrew? Or is the answer found more deeply within ourselves?

Having been brought up in a large extended Jewish family, being Jewish was never questioned. It was who we were and what we believed. There were as many variations of practice as there were families. It was our identity, as of all those in our close-knit neighborhoods. Not everyone was Jewish on those city streets, but each group knew "who they were" and it was respected. It wasn't until I was an adult, raising children, that small questions began to whisper. It was easy to brush them aside because now I was living in an area where there were few Jewish families, so I was who I was. When I joined different congregations over time, the questions began to resurface.

Therein lies the basis of our questioning. It should not come from a comparison but a level of belief within ourselves. As in every other aspect of our lives, there is a continuum of intensity. Where you are should be where you want to be. If it isn't, then you do something about it. It doesn't need to be major. Increasing attendance at services to become more comfortable with them may be enough. Participating in more events with like-minded people may answer your need. Picking up a book on a subject you are unfamiliar with might make you more aware. The opportunities are there. How you embrace them is your choice, not a measure of who or what you are. Instead of asking, "Am I Jewish enough?" perhaps we should be asking ourselves, "Am I the Jew I want to be?"

2018 SHEMA TOUR

Martin Luther King Jr. Day. It was a holiday. The day dawned cloudy, gray, and cold. Snowflakes drifted lazily past the window as I pulled on my sweater. Not a great day to be out and about. It was the day for the Shema Tour.

We met at the Temple at 9:00 o'clock and talked about the trip with the Rabbi. Assignments were offered and accepted. Hope everyone got one. Roll call was taken on the bus and we were off! To where? Pastor Karen Bailey-Francois was introduced as our tour guide and we were off to see Hartford through her eyes as she had come to know it over the years.

The Rev Dr. Karen Bailey-Francois talked about Hartford using terms like "Hartford Rubber Co.," "Spaghetti Warehouse", "Steam Plant" and "Parkville". We were headed for "Hands on Hartford" which has grown out of a consortium of churches in downtown Hartford. "Hands on Hartford" is a community action center on Bartholomew Avenue with facilities which include, a cafe, a commercial kitchen available for rent and used for catering, a food pantry, community gardens, and small residential apartments. Wanda Guzman was our guide for the building and also told us about a special Backpack program which provides food for about 240 children in need for over the weekends, and showed us the food pantry which serves 600 families per month, with shelves of food sponsored by various organizations in the community. They also sponsor a soup kitchen in another location in downtown Hartford and provide some medical and nursing services.

Our second stop was at the Hartford Seminary where Deena Grant, Ph.D. told us about their program of studies which focuses on the 3 Abrahamic Religions. She is a new professor of Judaic Studies and was most impressed by her experiences at the school where Jews, Christians, and Muslims work peacefully and lovingly side by side.

Lunch was hastily consumed at Lena's Pizza Place somewhere in Hartford. Delish!! Nice company too.

Rev. Karen's tour through Hartford included a drive-by at: Peter's Retreat (housing), Open Hearth (men's housing), McKinney Shelter (Women's and family housing) along with the statistic that 640 people were without beds on "Point-in-time count night" of Jan. 24, 2017. Many of us were introduced to the term "Couch-surfing". We also drove past the Charter Oaks Cultural Center where the arts are used to effect social change.

We finally ended up at the Young Israel Synagogue where a discussion with Rabbi Brander resulted in the expression of interest in cooperative programming and an expressed desire to be apprised of our decisions and results of our Shema Tour.
